An Influence Of Big Players On Forex Market

It is not a secret that in Forex Market both profit value and the ability to direct the price movements depend on the size of a capital. Banks have the highest influence on the market as they work with the biggest amounts and can deliberately change the price of the currency in order to support the macro economy of a country or just make a high profit. An average currency trader, even with a relatively high capital cannot move the market to the certain course. Even the biggest members in Forex are not able to take a full control of the price movements. A big fight breaks out on the Asian markets for such currencies as USD/JPY, EUR/JPY. On the one hand many Singapore Forex traders use this moment in order to increase their funds, but on the other hand it is a very risky game. The thing is that technical analysis of Forex market cannot predict financial events which for a short time can change the price for 100 pips and lead to the opposite trend.

At certain hours of a day Foreign Exchange market becomes very slow and even freezes because of the breaks in the main trading centers in the world. When trading opens in USA it is the most unpredictable time in the market in terms of technical analysis. When staying in the market alone, US banks can alter big price movements for up to 1000 pips. They try to push the price to the levels of massive stop-losses of the traders who traded in the opposite direction. If they succeed, the total closure of the positions dramatically changes the direction of the price. This strategy brings high profits in a short period of time. If you study the market, you can notice these tricks and may use them for increasing of your own investments.

The international financial markets attract a concentrated attention of the entire world and each piece of news makes its own changes in currencies' rates on the Forex market. Experienced Forex traders know the managers of the biggest banks by their names because any phrase from their speech may cause big fluctuations of a price. We cannot neglect the fundamental analysis of Forex market. Today any trading platform gives its traders a news strip of the most recent financial events. And on the websites of all Singapore brokers you can find a financial calendar which presents the time of the main news releases. You can create a trading strategy concentrated on the news or simply close a trading position before the announcement of the most important of them. In any case, every Singapore trader must take into his consideration such points as time of trading, news and noise of the market.
